

Shannon Lyndon-Lugg

A Brief Resumé

Shannon Lyndon-Lugg is an expert in the realm of Leadership, Organisational Development and Effectiveness and Sales Capability Development.

Shannon has over 20 years' experience of coaching, advising and challenging senior executives across multiple industries including Professional Services, Commercial and Investment Banking, Insurance, Airlines, Automotive and the IT sector.

Shannon holds a degree in Business with Majors in Human Resources and Industrial Relations, she is a qualified Executive Coach and has studied Positive Psychology with The University of Pennsylvania. She has experience working across Australia, Japan, China and Singapore.

Shannon's work focuses on taking a strength based approach to building leadership and cultural change in organisations, she creates pragmatic and leading edge approaches that drive results and unleash performance.

Prior to working with Corteks, Shannon held Leadership roles in a variety of blue-chip companies including National Australia Bank, SEEK, PricewaterhouseCoopers and Bank of America/Merrill Lynch.

Most recently, Shannon was the General Manager of People for Business and Private Banking at National Australia Bank. In this role she was responsible for setting the strategic Human Resources direction and culture change program and run a large scale transformation program that significantly improved engagement and performance of all Leaders and Bankers.

Shannon is particularly skilled at working with senior executive teams in building a high performance cultures through leader led capability solutions. Shannon has published numerous articles on growth and improving performance and is a skilled key note speaker.